Jacksonville, FL, November 2, 2011 — ShoptoStopSlavery.com, a cutting edge website devoted to raising awareness about human trafficking, has launched specialized educational services. The website founder, Robin Rossmanith, is available to offer presentations and workshops throughout the country on a variety of socially conscious topics.

Robin became the co-chair of the Northeast Florida Human Trafficking Task Force leading individuals and agencies in a community wide effort to prevent human trafficking, rescue and restore victims and prosecute traffickers. In 2010, she also began ShoptoStopSlavery.com, a website dedicated to informing consumers about products made with forced labor and providing opportunities for consumers to purchase slave free goods. Shop to Stop Slavery seeks to engage everyone in the efforts to end human trafficking.

Presentations can be tailored to the needs of any group and are available on a variety of topics concerning social justice issues, including the topics listed here.
